Who are you and what do you do?

I'm a scientist who found a graph a totally inadequate method of describing the wonderful world we live in, who became an artist and teacher.

How has your practice changed over Time?

I used to work exclusively in 3D, but for the last few years I've been enjoying printed and dyed textiles, with the occasional 3D adventure. However, I've always worked in the community, and that provides a huge variety of opportunities to work in different scales and media.

What themes do I pursue?

The uniqueness of the individual, exploring traditional techniques in an experimental way, biological shape and line. Much of my inspiration comes from the chalk grassland I live on.

Name three artists who have influenced your work.

Anya Gallaccio for materials being consistent with content.
Makoto Fujimura for his philosophy on art and beauty.
Gabriele Koch for simplicity of form.

What couldn't you live without?

My family, my sight and a Bible.
