Who are you and what do you do?

John is an outdoor pursuits coach and artist. Producing limited edition prints, but for the Arts Trail he is showing a series of ink and watercolour sketches, usually part of the print process, they are strong images in their own right.

How has your practice changed over time?

As John gets more involved producing limited edition prints, he continues to explore techniques to assist in producing textures and colours, and watercolour sketches are a key part of the journey.

What themes do you pursue?

He is currently producing a series of images of Piers viewed from the sea, a three year project that is in its final year.

Name three artists who have influenced your work

His influences are mainly print based, including Norman Ackroyd, Eric Ravillious and Muirhead Bone.

What couldn't you live without?

John has a need for experiences in natural environments, usually kayaking on the sea or walking in mountains, with friends, but often solo for heightened engagement with the power and beauty of nature.
